CURVE-BILLED THRASHERS AND CACTUS WRENS

Curve-billed Thrasher

Cactus Wren

Your Yard Is A Good Place For Cholla Cactus Dwellers!

- Easy maintenance: cholla are easy to grow from cuttings, use little water, and sprout colorful flowers and whimsical shapes.
- Garden dwellers: these birds thrive on seeds and insects already in your garden.
- Great architecture: both birds use the sharp spines of chollas for nest protection. Curve-billed Thrashers build a stick nest with an open top; Cactus Wrens build one or more nests of weeds, grass and twigs with a side entrance.

Cholla Cactus Dwellers Are Good For Your Yard!

- Dramatic characters: Curve-billed Thrashers are handsome and cheeky; Cactus Wrens are perky and playful, and they are Arizona's state bird!
  - Pest control: they love to eat insects, grubs, and seeds.
  - Musical accompaniment: Curve-billed Thrashers have a cheerful two-note call year round and a lovely spring medley. Cactus Wrens sing a rasping, comical song like an old car engine starting on a cold morning.

Recipe for Inviting CHOLLA DWELLERS to Your Home

CURVE-BILLED THRASHERS AND CACTUS WRENS

Ingredients:

- Cholla cacti, their favorite nesting site
- Bushes with dense mid-story
- Leaf litter, loose dirt, gravel, and brush piles where these birds dig for grubs and insects

Chain fruit cholla

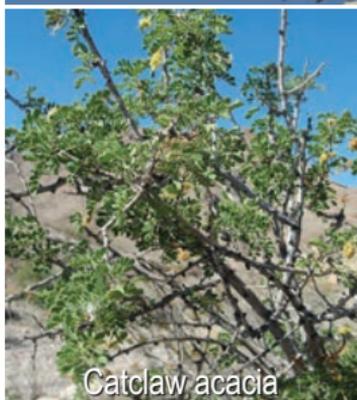

Staghorn cholla

Ocotillo

Creosote

Catclaw acacia

Directions:

- Create an area of desert scrub with cholla and native bushes that form an umbrella like canopy so the birds can feed beneath them on the ground in the shade.
- Both species will feed on old apples and tomatoes if you cut them in half and place them outside.
- Leave a layer of dead leaves and loose gravel on the ground for them to hunt insects.
- Keep your cats indoors—they kill many birds.
